For the Engle. PEOPLE WILL TALK.

Two ladies mot on the street one day Both were handsomely dressed and gray—Said one, have you heard of Mr., 'A.' 'No, indeed do tell me what is hispray.' On mercy, I've hear there the very day; Well really now I don't like to tell Von't hear if from somebody else; You have the house of the like to the like to be the control of the like to be like to be one to like the people will talk, you know,'

'te shoope will talk, you know.

'I reality don't know what it is that they say
But it must be quite shouching, for only today
When Charley came home ne said. "how don't go."
To see her again." and of course he must know
The whom I asked thy, he just scratched his head
And tried very hard to think what was said.
But at hast he gave up, and said. "Oh, don't reaso
I don't know what they say, they say what they plea e."
For people will talk, you know.

On dear that is dreadful and of course 'tis true
It's a pity indeed, she is so handsome tooI wonder now what these people will think
Who tho'ther so charming-their opinion will sink
Enviouse! I of her, how can you say so,
But I'm so glad that you told me, I'm sure I'll not But I less again: I couldn't, you know, To see for again: I couldn't, you know, If people are talking, for people will talk, Certainly they'll talk, you know,

So they parted, each going gully her way.

Each telling the story with the preface, "they say"
That dear firs. A, will have to leave town
For our own selfest sokes, we must put her down
ellet our own friends and all the world see;
How much purer and sweeter and better are we.
On shame on these people who talk and who listen
In whose cyes not a tendrop of sympathy glisten.
Let all succalook to themselves as they walk.
And keen their naths also.

finer than usual, and a little cooler headed in handling personal feelings. Joe Katz and his classmate in music under Prof. Sickner, Flora Caswell, must have known from the hearty applause they received that they had done well. As usual Enrina Koehler had selected a piece in which pathos abounded; and, as the latter is her forte, she, as usual, did finely. And to listen to the number immediately pre-ceding her one would imagine himself in the woods, listening entranced, to the ten-der notes of some sweet bird. Doubtless many did until the expiring chords of the ecompaniment dispelled the idea.

Friday evening a large number of his friends surprised Mr. Arthur Johnson at his home, 907 South Lawrence avenue. A most felicitous evening, it is reported. CRAWFORD GRAND. The Robert Downing company closed at the Crawford Grand last evening, pre-senting the "White Pilgrim." The presentation was good, being fully equal in its way to the better known pieces in Mr. Downing's repertoire. The story dates back to the twelfth century and is founded on a pretty legend of that time which was popular in Finland. Harold takes an oath to kill the first Norman that darkens his doors, but through the skillful plotting of a loving wife is constrained to break it and is also absolved from the oath, avoiding the penalty of perjury. In the last particular the play differs from the text. The piece is handsomely staged and many of the effects are worthy of note.

No other woman on the American stage can throw such deviltry and abandon into can throw such deviltry and abandon into the singing of a risque song, smothered in French or Italian, as does Jarbeau, and she is the one actress who can make a topical song captivating. On her clever-ness rests the burden of "Starlight," and ness rests the burden of "Starlight," and it is due almost entirely to the talent that that diaphanous fabric of nonsense has been a success for three seasons. Nevertheless she has good people with her, Chas. Kirk, Budd Ross, Wm. Selery and Bert Coote, being competent low comedians of the burlesque pattern, while handsome Eloise Mortimer, charming little inlie Kingeley (a really clear little tle Julie Kingsley (a really clever little actress). Filt Raymond, Alida Perreault and Carrie Francois make up the suitable female contingent. There is an effective musical corps as well, and Mr. Ed. been dull by any means at the stock yards and packing houses. About all of the hogs have been taken by Dold & Whitta-ker with an enquiry for more. This sec-tion of the city has presented a scene of activity that is gratifying and is daily becoming a more important market.

The receipts of cattle during the past week have been quite liberal being upward of 4,500. The market has been steady to strong on all good grades. There has been a strong demand for good native feeding cattle which are very scarce. Many of the Kansas feeders are now buying range cattle from the Panhandle and north New Mexico to feed. There is always a good demand for good corn fed or far butcher's cattle, the supply of which has been rather light for several days.

The hog market has remained about steady during the week. The receipts have been about 4,000 an increase over last week's receipts of nearly 500. The packing houses are anxious for more hogs. The market closed strong to 23/c higher than closing day last week.
